TEACHERS AND TRAINERS

RESOURCES

DIPLOMA FOR TEACHERS AND TRAINERS

Resource List

This is a selection of resources which teachers and trainers have found helpful for their professional development. The list is intended to indicate the kinds of materials which are available - it's not a prescribed reading list.

Look through and you should find resource(s) relevant to your needs in terms of context and coverage. Of course there is a wealth of resources available - in print and online. Consider these recommended resources as starting points rather than destinations.

WEBSITES

In a library, it's usually a good idea when you've found the particular book you were looking for then to 'look along the shelf' - you may well find other books which you did not know about and which prove to be just what you need. The same applies to searching on the Internet. Think laterally, eg in the use of search terms and following through links.

There are many educational websites which are portals to many more other websites - don't be shy of going through these portals to explore what lies beyond! This applies also to exploring fully within the website - as well as following links from the website to elsewhere. Make sure you navigate around the site and have a thorough idea of what is available.

Note useful sites when you find them - add them to your favourites/bookmarks list so that you can recall them quickly and easily. Time and use will prove to you whether websites are really helpful or not - and you should regularly housekeep your favourites/bookmarks list.

If you're a little unsure about the Internet, you will find the Intute Virtual Training Suite interesting and helpful:

<http://www.vts.intute.ac.uk/>

This suite provides a set of free online tutorials designed to help students, lecturers and researchers improve their Internet information skills. The tutorials are in the context of particular subjects, eg 'Internet Mathematician', 'Internet for English', 'Internet Geographer'. You can tour key sites for the subject, discover and develop tools and techniques to improve your Internet searching, review the critical thinking required when using the Internet eg about quality issues and avoiding common pitfalls, and reflect on how to use the Internet for studying, teaching and research.

Here are just a few selected education websites:

<http://www.cie.org.uk>

Cambridge International Examinations website offering a range of services, including teacher/trainer and learner support. Follow the Teacher Support link on the home page to find out more about, for example, CIE's Teacher Support Site which provides an excellent range of schemes of work, online assessments and other facilities.

<http://www.tes.co.uk>

Online – The Times Educational Supplement and the Times Higher Education Supplement. Up to date news and views on UK and International educational developments.

<http://www.bbc.co.uk/education>

Contains the BBC's choice of best websites for education and how these relate to learning.
